

9 Actions for Winning Through a Recession

A 2022-2023 Playbook

Gartner research showed that only a very small number of companies broke away from the pack during the Great Recession (end-2007 to mid-2009) and sustained their performance for the subsequent decade.

As the threat of another downturn looms, it's timely to revisit lessons learned — in particular, that outperformers win because of the decisive actions they take at the beginning of contractionary periods.

Outperformers:

- Commit before the downturn to the differentiating elements of their strategy to position themselves to power through uncertain times, not simply respond to them.
- Effectively balance top- and bottom-line growth across business conditions. Focusing only on cost-cutting has historically come at the expense of top-line growth.

Unique headwinds further complicate today's operating environment, but the differentiating decisions clearly hinge on digital.

Among CEOs, 94% want to maintain or accelerate the already intense pace of digital transformation sparked by the pandemic, and 70% of CFOs expect digital technology to get more funding.

The imperative for organizations is placing the right digital bets at the right cost.

*30 companies from the Fortune 1000 that had 1) consistent year-over-year revenue and margin improvement and long-term growth that exceeded their industry peers in the 20 years from 1994-2014, and 2) sustained that outperformance through 2017 (the last year for which full-year data was available at the time of the analysis).

Navigating Recession Now Would Be Much More Difficult Given the Triple Squeeze

The Triple Squeeze

3 compounding pressures that most executives have likely never experienced

1 Persistent high inflation

69% of CFOs still believe nonlabor input costs will rise significantly.

2 Scarce, expensive talent

47% of CFOs find it difficult to find and hire enterprise talent.

50% of CFOs still see a significant wave of workforce resignations.

3 Global supply challenges

48% of CFOs believe supply chain volatility and shortages will last beyond 2022.

What Failure Sounds Like During Recession

What we hope you don't have to tell the board in 2024:

“We cut costs too far and could not keep pace with demand when it returned.”

“Higher product pricing led to permanently losing market share.”

“Our costs kept increasing with inflation; now our margins are unattractive to investors.”

“Competitors out-innovated us with digital products and services.”

“We continued to spend aggressively on digital, but we did not capture the value like competitors.”

“Other companies secured great digital talent at a discount.”
